The “Heart Action Pump” – Revolutionizing the Funeral Industry.

The Heart Action Pump is a centrifugal designed pump that was invented with two objectives in mind. The first, a safe embalming method that would ease the embalming process; the second, a pump that could simulate a beating heart.

The Concept

The HAP is a centrifugal pump in its simplest form. This pump then will only eject fluid as long as there is fluid to inject and as long as there is room for fluid to be injected. Thus, the embalmer has complete confidence that he will not rupture an artery due to too much fluid in the body or too high of a pressure embalming.

The Design

The HAP is controlled by two modes, a continuous and a pulse. When in Continuous mode the pump will provide a constant flow of fluid to the body. When in pulse mode, it will simulate a beating heart by creating a systolic and diastolic pressure. This feature was designed to ease the embalming experience when encountering blockages. By switching to pulse mode, the body will have a pulsed surge of pressure against the blockage without forcing fluid into the body. This will stretch the artery around the blockage and allow it to break up with ease.

The Revolution

The Noayr “Heart Action Pump” then will automatically adjust for the rate of flow and simplifies the embalming experience, reducing cost and giving your more time.
